The House of The Dead series are basically a rail shooter games where you kill zombies, and it's a pretty awesome series too made by SEGA. The series started in arcades, then ported to consoles. It also did some pretty popular spin-offs like Pinball of the Dead and Typing of the Dead. Though HofD ain't a series where you would find an outstanding soundtrack, but then Overkill appeared.

HotD: Overkill took the series and made it even better, it's so over the top, it's awesome altogether. And the soundtrack is truly worthy of talking about. The lyrics or voice-overs in this song demonstrate how over the top and intense his game is, even for a Wii game. But the music itself is so damn good, you could just listen it without any voice-overs and it would still be very good. This song itself pretty much represents most of the soundtrack, such good jazzy rhythm and beats, it could well fit into a Tarantino movie.
