Anime-Expo starts off tomorrow amidst some controversy with a CEO change and various policy changes that have upset many of the regular con goers, including the initial report that there would be no arcade at Anime-Expo 2010. This prompted some to voice their concerns and there was at least one protest group on Facebook about the lack of an arcade this year.

All the worrying about an arcade came to an end yesterday in the 11th hour as Anime-Expo announced that Arcade Infinity would be the official arcade for AX2010. I'm sure most of you who visit this site are well aware of Arcade Infinity and its place in the grand scheme of arcades, especially in regards to Bemani games.

As a note, Arcade Infinity will be closed till Monday as the machines will be at the Los Angeles Convention Center. The arcade will be open from 6am till midnight each day, you can also check out the list of arcade machines in this thread
. The arcade will be located in the concourse foyer and should be accessible without a badge.

See you at Anime-Expo this weekend!
