

I Love That Song! - Gonna celebrate!!

Written by DarkTetsuya

Tuesday, 18 January 2011 18:13 - Last Updated Tuesday, 18 January 2011 22:33

{audio}<http://angry-gamers.com/music/omt.mp3>{/audio}

(For copyright reasons I can't make this song available for download, sorry!)

For those of you who've been lucky enough to see TRON: Legacy while it's still in theaters (I saw it, two words: fucking EPIC!

) then you probably know about the amazing soundtrack crafted by the talented artists known as Daft Punk... But what I bet you didn't know (heck, even I didn't till someone told me today!) is that TRON wasn't DP's first appearance on a movie soundtrack... actually I'm not 100% sure this other movie is either, but it did come first!

(If you want to hear more about it, hit the jump to see more, including the music video that this song had in that movie!)

Okay, so Daft Punk's first movie appearance was actually a collaboration between them and Leiji Matsumoto, an animated feature called Interstella 5555. Basically it's about an interplanetary rock group that gets captured and forced to hide their identities... what's interesting about this movie is there's no dialog. Which is good for people who hate poorly-translated anime, kinda hard to screw up dialog that isn't there, huh?!

I Love That Song! - Gonna celebrate!!

Written by DarkTetsuya

Tuesday, 18 January 2011 18:13 - Last Updated Tuesday, 18 January 2011 22:33

But you do get to hear them sing, in the form of Daft Punk's music -- like this video for my featured song, One More Time:

Fortunately (or unfortunately, if you like Daft Punk) the movie's only about an hour long... but if you liked what you see here I suggest tracking it down and checking it out!

(Also! As they're the main musicians behind the movie soundtrack, keep an eye out for them to actually make a cameo in the movie! I saw at least one scene where you can find them, and possibly another!!)