What can I say about PaRappa the Rapper, basically that it was the pioneer of Rhythm actions games, combining simple button pressing gameplay in rhythm with the music it had. It inspired games like the BEMANI Series (DDR, Beatmania, etc.), Frequency and Amplitude, Pump it up, and such. Not too many people played PaRappa in its days, but it became a classic nonetheless. Good thing more people can play it since it has a remake version on the PSP. One of the most memorable tracks in the game is Master Onion's rap, with its Oriental theme and lyrical rapping makes it a something like a "Kung-Fu Fighting" homage.
