"The scariest game of all time" is not all killer babies and Pyramid Heads. It also features bonus endings and easter eggs including a conclusion that reveals that a dog was controlling Silent Hill all along which is followed by a techno barking song and characters dancing in the credits.

Although the newer titles have received criticism from fans, mainly for changing development studios and the introduction of more action oriented characters. Even after a decade Silent Hill is impressing and frightening fans of the series and even new wanderers into the town...
