We celebrate 750 episodes of our show by looking back at some of the stories from over the years, then jump right into the news for this week. We talk a bit about a new program to use Nintendo Labo in schools, which has us thinking back on educational games that really worked for us, and why they worked, and what educational games might try to do in the future. Also, we summarize the goings on at TwitchCon, which happened over the weekend.

Also in the news:

* New Religious Pokemon Go Clone

* Soul Calibur VI Troll Characters

* Library of Congress on Old Video Games

* Dreamcast games closer to being on Switch
